

Emmanuel Iduma, born in 1989, is a writer who trained as a lawyer in Nigeria. He is the author of The Sound of Things to Come (The Mantle, 2016), a novel published in Nigeria as Farad (Parresia, 2012). His recent book of travel stories, A Stranger's Pose (Cassava Republic Press, 2018) was longlisted for 2019 Ondaatje Prize.

He has contributed essays to a range of magazines and journals, including The New York Review of Books, ARTNews, Art in America, BOMB, Brooklyn Rail, Guernica, British Journal of Photography, Aperture, and Hyperallergic; and to monographs and artists books by Victor Ehikhamenor, Lina Iris Viktor, Dawit L. Petros, Lorenzo Vitturi, Ibrahim Mahama, Todd Webb, Jo Ratcliffe, and Ming Smith. For the Carnegie International 2018, he was invited to contribute a travelogue essay to the catalogue, and later served on the jury to award its Fine Art Prizes.

From 2009 to 2019, he edited the acclaimed literary magazine Saraba, supporting the work of new and emerging African writers. His editorial work has culminated in two books, Gambit: Newer African Writing (The Mantle, 2014), which he co-edited with Shaun Randol, and Limbe to Lagos: Nonfiction from Cameroon and Nigeria (Goethe Institut, 2018), which he co-edited with Dami Ajayi and Dzekashu Macviban.

Between 2011 and 2016, he worked with Invisible Borders Trans-African Photographers' Organization, and participated in four of its road trips across Africa, publishing short reflections on a dedicated blog. His work with the group was shown in several group exhibitions, including at the New Museum, Venice Biennale, FOAM, and the Centre Pompidou. In 2016, as director of publications for the organization, he was managing editor of The Trans-African, a journal of reflections on art and visual culture, where he contributed monthly essays on Nigerian photography.

He was appointed as associate curator of the first-ever Nigerian Pavilion at the Venice Biennale, in 2017, and edited the exhibition catalogue. In 2020, he was one of 10 writers invited to participate in Outriders Africa, a journey through several African countries organized by the Edinburgh International Book Festival.

His art writing has been honored with a Creative Capital/Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant (2017), and in 2020, the inaugural Irving Sandler Award for New Voices in Art Criticism by the International Association of Art Critics, USA chapter.

I Am Still with You, his memoir on the aftermath of the Nigerian Civil War, is forthcoming from Algonquin Books in the U.S., and William Collins in the U.K.

Iduma received an MFA in Art Writing from the School of Visual Arts, New York in 2015 and has taught in three of its graduate programs. He divides his time between Lagos, Nigeria and New York City.